

Paris Disney – kids again!

By Chloe De Landgraft

My sister and I have always wanted to go to Disneyland, so the allure of Paris Disney was too great, we had to go!!

We took the Eurostar to Lille where we had a quick stop and changed trains to Paris Disneyland, which only took 2 and a half hours all up from central London.

When we arrived at the Disneyland Station (Marne La Vallee Chessy) the parks were right there in front of us but we took the public train to our hotel one stop away. We booked into the Relais Spa Chessy which was a very nice 4 star hotel and only about 200m from the train station so very convenient to get back and forth to the Disneyland from without actually being at Disneyland and paying the ridiculous prices.

My sister and I spent the day at Walt Disney Studios running around like little kids and going on as many rides as possible. The Walt Disney Studios Park closes at 7pm but the Disneyland Park doesn't close until 10pm so we went across and did a few rides there and had some dinner before making our way back to our hotel.

Our second day we spent just in Disneyland and I would recommend working out what you would like to see/do and make them a priority if you only have a couple of days like we did.

After going on all the scary rides, visiting the castle, having our picture taken with Minnie Mouse and watching the street parade we boarded the Eurostar two very happy girls all the way back to London.
